AIR UP THERE

ARTIST CYPRIEN GAILLARD HAS EXAMINED ONGOING MAN VS. NATURE THEMES IN HIS EPIC VIDEO WORK. HIS NEXT PROJECT WILL EXPLORE HISTORY, AND PROBABLY END UP MAKING IT

My family used to own a castle in the Loire Valley in France. It was sold in the late '70s to an American real-estate company that owned vineyards in Napa Valley. The castle was dismantled rock by rock and shipped to San Francisco to be rebuilt in 1985 just outside Napa, overlooking the vineyard on one side and the municipal golf course on the other. Last year I bought a piece of land in the south of France, so now I want to ship in a castle from America. Built in the Bronx by the great architect Paul Rudolph, the Tracey Towers [shown at right] will be demolished in 2014. I figure this could be the work of my life, to save them by moving them to France. Cyprien Gaillard
